Reported from Ottawa that Sir Hildred Thompson will return from the cabinet to allow a complete revision of the treaty with France and that he will be appointed lieutenant-governor of Manitoba.

The report of the Dominion cabinet upon the proposed amendment is published.

It appears that some of the regulations proposed were amended under authority of the amendment of 1893, and could not be affected by the disallowance of the 1892 ordinance.

The lieutenant-governor of the Territories and his cabinet have, however, been requested to carefully examine into the compliance of the ordinance with the provisions of the act.

It may be given by amending the ordinance or the regulations under it to relieve the situation.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

The present winter is unusual in the amount of sickness that has been developed in all quarters since it began, to which rule Edmonton has not experienced an exception. It would seem that the recurring epidemics of influenza are accompanied by or result in epidemics of other and more directly fatal complaints. Those who are afflicted by any other illness at the time of a visitation of influenza are in greater danger during its continuance, and those who have suffered from its effects are more subject to any other disease. Consequently there has been a high death rate all over the world for several years past. While Edmonton has not suffered as severely as many other localities—for there are several forms of disease from which we are as yet practically free—the change from the condition of affairs a very few years ago, when sickness was a rarity and deaths almost unknown, is most marked. Coupled with the change of conditions which has followed the advent of the dreaded influenza or grippé is also the change resulting from the great influx of people that has taken place within the same years. When people are coming from all quarters of the world as they are to Edmonton they are frequently exposed to disease on the way, from which they have not the opportunity to protect themselves, and they consequently bring disease with them. These facts are stated for the purpose of drawing attention to the necessity of more stringent and comprehensive measures than have yet been taken in this town and district to prevent the spread of contagious or infectious diseases. In times gone by when there were fewer people, who were consequently more isolated, and before the unfavorable conditions which have been alluded to existed, it was the custom to pay very little attention to the question whether any certain case of sickness was contagious or not, and comparatively no great harm resulted—particularly in the case of what are called children's complaints such as measles or scarlet fever, in regard to which it was argued by some: "These diseases can only be taken once, and the children might just as well take them now and then they will be safe afterwards." This argument might be good as long as the diseases were of a mild type. But since the influenza has made inroads on the constitutions of a large proportion of both children and grown people it cannot be known just how severely even a supposed to be mild type of disease will affect any certain person—until it is too late. Of this we have had ample proof within the last year or two, as a visit to the cemeteries will show. Whether any certain disease is of a mild or virulent type, it is only common prudence to avoid contagion and prevent its spread. To do otherwise is worse than folly—it is a crime. It is a duty which rests upon parents and friends, as well as upon medical men and those in authority, to see to it in the first place that those for whom they care are not exposed to contagion, and in the next place to see that if they have contracted a contagious disease they do not cause it to be communicated to others. Every member of the community owes this much to himself and his neighbors. While recognizing fully the efforts that have been made in the past to prevent the spread of contagion, it must be acknowledged that more generally supported, more determined and more continuous efforts are necessary to secure that freedom from disease which is so desirable and so necessary to the happiness and prosperity of the community. The first duty in this matter rests upon parents and guardians, for without their active interest and co-operation no recommendations made by physicians or regulations passed by those in authority can be made fully effective. No doubt the measures necessary to prevent the spread of contagion occasion a great deal of inconvenience and some loss on the sufferers, and no doubt in many cases the authorities feel a delicacy about enforcing necessary regulations; but it is not too much to say that the public interest demands the sacrifice of private convenience in such cases; and if regulations are enforced with an even hand the chief objection to them would be done away with. A great impediment that has existed to prevent the enforcing of proper regulations in the case of contagious diseases in many western towns is the feeling that such enforcement might cause a scare, or that a public knowledge of the existence of disease might hurt the town or country. Such arguments as these should have no weight when lives are at stake and are not sound in any case. The existence of disease cannot be concealed, and active measures to prevent its spread would naturally tend to create confidence rather than panic. Nothing can tend so greatly towards a loss of confidence and general panic as the concealment of disease or a lack of proper measures of precaution against it. In the case of Edmonton there have been cases of scarlet fever in the town and district for months past. In most cases the disease has been of a mild form. But in some it has developed virulent features and has resulted fatally. It has never reached the proportions of an epidemic, but it has continued to exist and to claim a victim here and there. In view of the fact that the end of winter is approaching and that we hope for great things in the way of immigration in the spring, it should be the care of all those in control to see that the disease is stamped out before spring opens, when it would certainly be much harder to bring it under control, and when it might assume a more virulent form.

REDUCED RATES.

The news that a substantial reduction has been made on the railway rates to the coast, although a little slow in coming is none the less welcome, not only for the immediate gain to the district in cold cash, but also for the principle which it acknowledges; namely that Edmonton is entitled to an export rate to the Pacific Coast having some proportion to the rate to the Atlantic. The reduction on the rate to Vancouver from 50c to 35c per hundred lbs. is large enough to speak for itself. It practically adds 5c to the price of every bushel of oats in the Edmonton district, which on a crop of 300,000 bushels means $15,000 to the farmers, and a clear gain to the district of not less than $5,000 on say 100,000 bushels exported. Even yet the rate is not as low by eight cents per hundred pounds as for an equal estimated distance to Port Arthur, but is perhaps as low as we might expect considering the relatively small exports as yet from this district. With an increased export in the future we may fairly demand and will no doubt be conceded a rate westward at least equal to the rate for the same distance eastward. In the meantime we freely admit that so far as the export rate is concerned the promises made by Messrs Kerr and Whyte during their visit here have been made good and we have fair hopes that proportionate reductions in local rates on grain, coal and hay will also be conceded.

Not the least pleasing feature of the case is the fact that although the C. P. R. does hold an iron bound monopoly in this part of the Northwest, we have plain proof that its magnates will listen to reason, that their sense of power does not over master their business instincts, and that when people have a good case and present it fairly and earnestly they will get at least attention and possibly the concessions demanded. The BULLETIN has always been of opinion that the reason fairer rates were not accorded this district before was because the railway authorities were not fully aware of the injustice of the case as it stood—hence its humble efforts to shed a mild radiance on the question during the past few months. In this connection it might not be out of place to point out that of all the large and powerful and interesting and valuable and cheap papers which ask and receive patronage from this district not one of them so much as cheeped on this question in favor of Edmonton's case. The moral is evident. The BULLETIN does not often indulge in poetry, but the following lines seem so appropriate that the rule is broken just this once:

The whole world loves the modest man,
Whether he be great or small;
But it yields up its plunks in very big chunks
To the man with a surplus of gall.
The whole world loves the quiet man,
Who's as silent all day as the owls;
But its needles to mention it gives it's attention
To the fellow that gets up and howls.
The whole world loves a peaceful man,
Who sees no occasion to bicker;
But the full right of way you'll permit me
to say,
It gives to the strenuous kicker.

THE DUNDEE COURIER.

Mr. Osler, the Courier's agricultural commissioner to America, writes:

All around Edmonton the country is thickly wooded with balm of gileads and poplars, and as the town is increasing very fast, the land has been surveyed and laid out in regular street blocks. The wood along what are to be the streets of the future is being cut down and railways formed, the walks at the sides being floored with boarding. The trees being on the squares where the buildings are to be are left growing, so that builders will have their choice of leaving whatever number of trees they wish around their houses. The result will be that even the new streets will be lined and the houses surrounded with stately groves of timber, which will afford good shelter, and give even the new town a park-like boulevard appearance. Perhaps the greatest disadvantage Edmonton at present labors under is the want of a good water supply. As I said before, the town is built on the very brink of the perpendicular cliffs of the great Saskatchewan, 200 feet deep. This great gorge completely drains the country for a great distance from each side of the river, so that there are

NO NATURAL SPRINGS, and wells would have to be dug to the level of the river before water could be touched. Pumping from the river would be an easy matter, but for six months of the year, that is during summer, the water in the river is thick and muddy by the melting of the snow on the mountains, and altogether unfit for domestic purposes. Water carts are employed to bring the water from a distance and distribute it in bucketfuls to the householders. The town has an electric light system of which the people are justly proud, the dynamo being driven by a powerful steam engine placed down at the edge of the river. Fuel is abundant and cheap; any quantity of firewood can be obtained from the surrounding country at little more than the cost of cutting and hauling. Besides, the district is all underlaid with coal, seams of which jut out all along the banks of the river, and at low water the inhabitants have nothing more to do than hew out their year's supply and cart it home. Several coal drifts have been run in right below the town, and as these drifts extend to just above the level of the river no plant whatever is necessary for hauling the coal to the surface. Consequently the supply is very cheap, the usual price being 10s per ton. The subsoil of the whole district is permeated with

GOLD DUST.

A good show is obtained wherever the soil is excavated any depth, and at low water a great number of people find employment in washing for gold along the bed of the river. When I was there the volume of water was just beginning to fall, and this industry was just commencing. I stood several hours beside a party of prospectors who were just commencing operations. They were getting a good show, but not in sufficient quantities to encourage them to prosecute their labors, but as the river fell so as to enable them to get deeper into its bottom they knew they would be more fortunate. The banks buy the gold dust from them, and each prospector can usually calculate upon making the value of $3 daily. Petroleum had been struck shortly before I was there, about thirty miles north from the town, and I met Mr. Gordon Cumming with a party of prospectors on their way to enquire into this discovery, with the intention of commencing operations for working the oil if the information proved correct. Mr. Cumming is the principal partner in the Quorn Ranch in the MacLeod district, which I have already described, and he has another ranche in the Edmonton district stocked with.

ABERDEEN-ANGUS CATTLE, which he told me suited the country very well. He said he had a steady demand for the bulls bred upon this ranche, and that these when graded with the native cattle gave the best possible results. I could quite corroborate this, for upon several ranches which I inspected in Edmonton district where Aberdeen-Angus bulls were being used the offspring were very superior. It must be understood, however, that in this district the cattle are housed during winter, and hand-fed with prairie hay and gristled grain, and to this fact, I believe, may be attributed the great success of the Angus doddies. There can be no denying the fact that where ordinary care is given to shelter and feed, no finer or better breed of cattle can be found than the North of Scotland black skins. Still I think that, other breeds might prove better rustlers, and where the stock are left exposed to the inclemencies of the weather and extremes of temperature, and have to find their food and gather it for themselves from off the prairie, the Galloway or West Highland breed might suit the country better. For one thing they have a thicker, heavier coat of hair and are better fitted to resist the cold. And moreover a hide heavily coated with thick wavy hair is likely to be an article of considerable mercantile value in the future, to take the place of the buffalo robes so much sought after, but now quite unobtainable.

THE BREEDING OF GALLOWAYS

with coats suitable for this purpose is sure to be one of the great aims with ranchers in the future. But still, although the Galloway might be better fitted than the Angus for supplying an imitation buffalo robe, I cannot help thinking that the West Highland would supply a skin better than either of them, that as rustler he would be far superior and as a beef producer would prove equal to the best. The great bulk of cattle in this district are shorthorn grades, and although pines are being taken to improve the breed, a great deal has yet to be done before they come up to our home breeds. Some knowing ones out there insist that the finer they are graded up the worse they are fitted for the country; that the native scrubs are acclimatised and stand the winter better than any other breed; that they are cunning enough always to seek a lee corner during a storm; and that a scrub cow will do what no other breed will—stand between her calf and the force of a gale, and protect it from the storm. It may be thought that Edmonton being so far north—nearly 300 miles from the international boundary line—must necessarily be much colder and inclement in winter than farther south. Such, however, is not the case. The run of the rivers being northwards, the land trends lower as we go north. The contour of the mountains permits of

THE WARM CHINOOK WINDS

from off the Pacific having more effect, and Edmonton being much nearer the Pacific than the provinces of Assiniboia and Manitoba the snow does not lie so deep, nor are the winters so severe as they are in these provinces, or even to the south of the international boundary. It is a well known fact that when buffaloes existed in numbers on the plains they instinctively went north to their winter quarters.

[Mr. Osler has evidently jumped to conclusions regarding the water supply at Edmonton and is unusually wide of the mark. Although the river is 200 feet below the level of the country around, abundance of water is procured from wells in Edmonton at from 30 to 70 feet, and there are many wells. The boiler which furnishes steam for K. A. McLeod's planing mill draws its water from such a well and the supply is ample. The water is good. His conclusions regarding the quality of water in the Saskatchewan is also wide of the mark. The water of the Saskatchewan is suitable for all purposes at all seasons of the year. It is muddy during the high water of June and July, but in spring and fall as well as in winter it is clear as crystal, being a glacier fed stream. Even when it is muddiest, the water clears perfectly on being allowed to stand a short time. The water of the Saskatchewan is wholesome and good in every respect.—EDITOR.]

The Moosemound Spectator says that wheat is 42c at Moosemound, and 45c at Fleming and at Wapella on each side, along the C. P. R. line. It wants to know why this is true.
Following the example set by the Manitoba legislature the births, deaths and marriage act is to be amended in British Columbia. Salvation Army officers are to be given the legal right of christening, burying, marrying, and other privileges enjoyed by ordained ministers of the gospel.

Bathford Herald: The hunt of moose and deer in this district has been unusually good this season, especially north of the Saskatchewan. The catch of deer has also been good, particularly in the area of the lake, which never were so numerous and uniformly good. In some cases a single trader has secured as many as are on an average exported in the whole season. Although rabbits are still plentiful very few lynx have come so far south.
Saskatchewan Herald: Some time ago it was discovered that a number of the sheep imported by Dr. Pare last fall were affected with the scab, and the flock was quarantined. Being north of the Saskatchewan, where there are no other sheep, there is no immediate danger of the disease spreading. But prevention being easier than stamping out, Veterinary Inspector Evans, of Maple Creek, was sent to look into this case, and to examine into the general condition of live stock in the district. He arrived here last week, and this week went to the range of the infected flock, after which he will make an extended tour of inspection.
